Malpractice insurance row

Doctors urge public not to panic as some close

Doctors are urging the public to check with their regular physicians before panicking and heading for the hospital today as some Valley doctors shut down to protest rising insurance rates

Many doctors' offices will remain open as usual. Some doctors will accept patients whose regular physician has closed down.

Doctors who are shutting down have come in for some criticism from physicians staying open. Dr. Irven Moncrief, a general practitioner in Pleasanton who says he speaks for many Valley medics, says, "There are only a few doctors making all the flap" (over malpractice insurance.) Many, like Moncrief, have applied for Imperial insurance, which is somewhat lower than the Argonaut insurance whose rates are quadrupling as of today.

Imperial insurance still runs to $10,000 a year and more for high - risk doctors, but at least that's less than the $22,000 top on the new Argonaut rates that went into effect at midnight.

"Doctors were taking care of patients before insurance companies were around," is Moncrief's contention. "Most doctors aren't going to desert their patients now."

Some doctors have said they can't get up the money to pay the new rates, they would have to pass the huge increases on to their patients and they are calling for legislative reform so insurance companies won't have to charge so much in the first place.

They are not calling it a protest, but physicians have said they will retire early, take a vacation, refuse to take new patients and implement a "Mayday" plan at Valley Memorial Hospital because of the new rates.

Moncrief calls the "Mayday" plan a scheme to divert would - be office patients to the year - old Family Health Care Center in San Ramon and to VMH's own emergency room. The Livermore hospital's administrator, Tom Andrews, has announced patients should go directly to either facility if their own doctor is not available.

Moncrief says most doctors will probably be available and if not, patients should try other doctors rather than sit at home with a complaint that does not appear urgent.

"People die that way," he warned.

On that point Andrews, too, is in agreement: Patients should not try to guess at the seriousness of an illness but should get to medical help even if the waiting lines at a facility are longer than usual, he advises.

Moncrief was sharply critical of anesthesiologists who have said they won't work unless covered with VMH insurance. That, he says, "bottlenecks" all surgery except critical care. VMH's policy until further notice is only to admit patients if it is a case of life and death or permanent impairment.

VMH has a "panel" of about 20 doctors who will take turns being on call, covered by VMH's own insurance while on emergency duty. That unfairly shuts out the rest of the Valley doctors and funnels the business into the hospital, the physician complains.

He said the county hospitals to which patients may be diverted are not equipped for the demand. And says he speaks for many doctors in railing against the shutdown that began today.

"A protest isn't going to get anyone anything except denying patients services," he declared.

In preparation for the coming squeeze, surgery at VMH went on until midnight last night. Some 17 operations were scheduled, with four possible additonal surgeries, in comparison with 11 on an average day. Coverage under the doctors' old rates ended at midnight so doctors were trying to get their patients in under the line.

Yesterday afternoon, a VMH spokesperson reported 94 beds full at the 108 - bed hospital, a very high percentage for VMH.

Newest HS trustee a family man

The newest Amador Valley Joint High School District trustee brings a considerable background in youth activities and a precise mind for detail to his new position.

Families in the district will almost certainly share a bond of friendship with Wayne Barnes, a nine and one-half year resident of Dublin. Currently vice president of the Dublin High School Booster Club, he is starting his eighth season as a Pop Warner Football League coach, was a Dublin Little League officer and coach for six years, founder and cubmaster of Pack 908 in 1967-68 and recipient of a "Husband of the Year" award in 1968 from the Dublin Junior Women's Club and from the California Federation of Women's Clubs Junior Membership-Mount Diablo District.

Barnes is also a member of the Dublin-San Ramon Lions Club and an associate charter member of the Dublin Jaycees.

He and his wife, Valerie, and five children reside on Ione Court.

In making the announcement Tuesday night, board president Jack Delaney said the board went for the most qualified person in reviewing the nine candidates. He added that the list of aspirants included men and women from throughout the district — Dublin, Pleasanton and Sunol.

Delaney made no reference to commentary by The Times of a couple weeks ago to have the board name the candidates so that the electorate would have a chance to meet them in advance of the appointment.

Residents of the Amador district may still seek a special election if any segment of the electorate believes there are better candidates for the trustee position. A petition with the names of five per cent of those voting in the last general election would have to be submitted to the county within the next couple of weeks.

Barnes cannot formally act on board affairs for 30 days, according to law, so that the aforementioned option is allowed time.

Barnes is a supervising computer systems analyst with Pacific Gas and Electric, a firm he has been associated with for 24 years. A graduate of City College of San Francisco, with an Associate of Arts degree in business administration, Barnes also attended San Francisco State.

He and his wife have five children, Mary, 8, a second-grader at Frederickson; Christine, 11, a sixth-grader at Frederickson; Jeffrey, 15, a freshman at Dublin High; Richard, 16, a junior at Dublin, and Stephen, 19, a freshman at Chabot College.

In other business, the bid award on the Amador Valley High School security lighting project was delayed until the May regular board session because the contractor inadvertently sent the key document from the county counsel's office via mail rather than hand-carrying it to the board as instructed.

Following the meeting, some 75 persons joined in the dedication of the new Valley High School facility, located on Dublin Boulevard.

Apathy at BART talks

DUBLIN — Only 14 people showed up Tuesday night to hear about BART's plans for the valley.

The two-hour public hearing was one of two scheduled to provide valley residents with an opportunity to comment on the alternative bus or rail systems the Bay Area Rapid Transit District has proposed for this area. (The second hearing was held last night in Livermore.)

A draft report issued in late March summarizes the two alternatives but makes no recommendations about whether the $370 million rail link or the $80 million bus system would be the best system.

A final decision on what kind of public transportation will be provided for the valley will most likely not be made until next fall when the Metropolitan Transportation Commission considers amendments to the Bay Area Regional Transportation Plan.

Following that decision, Howard Goode of BART told the sparse audience Tuesday, some method of financing will have to be determined.

Robert Allen, the valley's representative to the BART board, and Mike Dyett of Livingston and Blayney, the planning consultant firm which helped prepare the draft report, were the other two officials at the hearing.

Alice Cline of Pleasanton expressed concern about Santa Clara and San Mateo counties busing patrons to the Fremont and Daly City BART stations when both of those counties declined to join the BART District and thus pay no taxes for maintenance of the system.

She also said she believed the valley should be provided with a rail link rather than a bus system. "Why should valley residents pay taxes for 20 to 25 years for BART and not get a rail system? We could do better contracting with AC Transit."

Allen replied, "We on the BART board are rather concerned about the Daly City situation." He also added BART is trying to develop a strong access program for its stations.

Goode also said the district is "investigating methods by which we might get revenue from out-of-county people."

According to BART's legal counsel, however, Goode added, "we cannot discriminate against patrons on the basis of residence."

Pleasanton Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire questioned Dyett about the "growth inducing impacts" of BART. He had cited figures that projected an additional 12,000 residents if the rail system were constructed and an additional 9,000 residents if the bus system were implemented.

Dyett explained those figures are 1990 estimates and the consultants based them on the fact that there will "already be improved access on Interstate 580. By 1990, I-580 will be free-flowing" and thus, the transit system would not generate a significant amount of additional residents."

Desperate fight fails to save baby's life

LIVERMORE — Four San Jose doctors fought valiantly but in vain for nearly 24-hours to save the life of a four-year-old Livermore boy who died late Tuesday night after he was pulled from his backyard pool Monday evening.

Gregory Steven Brace was pronounced dead at 10:30 p.m., Tuesday. He had fallen into his parents' 69 Agate Ct. pool shortly before 5 p.m., Monday.

During the nearly 30-hour interlude, doctors at Valley Memorial Hospital placed young Gregory on an emergency resuscitator while his parents voluntarily donated their son's kidneys in the event of his death

His mother, Jerri Brown, discovered the body at the deep end of the pool, and, with the help of neighbors, pulled him out. Gregory may have been there as long as 10 minutes. Police Officer Robert Springer administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until the arrival of a Tri-Cities ambulance.

Late Monday night he was transferred to Santa Clara Valley Medical Center's intensive care pediatrics unit where the four doctors worked desperately to save his life.

Dr. Stephen Fortman, one of the team, said plans to transplant the boy's kidneys were cancelled when he was taken off the resuscitator and an electroencephalograph showed any "brain death" from the 10 minutes without oxygen was "not irreparable."

Sierra Club's anti-580 suit prompts legal counter-actions

As many as a dozen intervening suits may be filed against the Sierra Club in its legal battle to block the widening of Interstate 580 for environmental reasons.

A suit on behalf of the Alameda County Building Trades Council and the Operating Engineers Local 3 has been filed in San Francisco District Court and The Times has learned at least five other agencies are considering involvement in that litigation.

The Sierra Club is suing state and federal governmental agencies who approved that $110 million widening project. That suit was filed April 15 and bids are scheduled to be opened for the mammoth construction project on May 21.

Bill Leonard of the Associated Building Industries said that organization would probably intervene in the Sierra Club litigation next week. He expressed "disappointment at the Sierra Club action" and added, "It's irresponsible. They have apparentay laid back in the weeds until this propitious moment to file their lawsuit, knowing full well that a delay beyond the magic appropriations date would effectively mean the death of this vital and necessary project."

Proponents of the eight-lane widening have contended any attempts to re-design the project at this juncture to a reduced number of lanes would delay it until the appropriated funds would be lost.

Leonard also claimed "all sides had full exposure (to the project) at a whole host of public hearings. All environmental agencies...did their thing to modify the project and then, dully elected and appointed public decision-makers made their decisions...after they had been exposed to a mountain of environmental data."

He referred to the Sierra Club as assuming the role of a "benevolent dictator" which has "ultimate veto power, thereby making a mockery of this prior democratic process."

Leonard said he believed there "should be some way the public could sue the Sierra Club for damages caused by this delay."

Lamar Childers of the 17,000-member Building Trades Council called the Sierra Club action "a delaying tactic" that could result in the loss of "500 jobs a day" for construction-related industries.

Among the other groups that are considering intervening in the suit are the Associated General Contractors, the Aggregates and Concrete Association and the Pacific Legal Foundation.

Run Zumbrun of the Pacific Legal Foundation, a Sacramento-based public-interest law firm, said the foundation is "looking into the case" and will decide within two weeks whether to intervene.

Since its incorporation two years ago, that foundation has litigated 20 major cases nation-wide, most notably the defense of the Auburn Dam project, also against the Sierra Club.

Kolln St. residents ponder legal action

PLEASANTON - Although the city council voted Monday to keep the north end of Kolln Street closed, that action has not satisfied area residents who are considering legal action.

Many citizens in the Jensen Tract and Amador Estates are concerned about the effect the proposed Pleasanton Garbage Service transfer station will have on their neighborhoods.

The transfer station is planned for a 7.5-acre parcel on Busch Road, and the only existing access is along the Valley Avenue extension, which runs along the north side of Amador Estates.

The citizens have presented petitions to the council urging them to reconsider that location until alternative access routes can be provided but those have not persuaded the council. Ray Valdez, one of the residents, said they are considering hiring a lawyer to argue their case but a decision on that will not be made until later this week.

The decision to keep the north end of Kolln Street closed until full improvements are made along Valley Avenue (which connects with Busch Road) was made at the request of the residents.

The city had planned to open Kolln onto Valley for the convenience of residents in those tracts but the residents were fearful others might use it as an alternative route to reach the transfer station site.

Kolln Street decision was, however, subordinate to the residents' major concern about the increased garbage truck and citizen traffic along Valley Avenue and the noise and litter problems that might be created.

Councilman Roger McLain said he could not "get upset over 150 cars on that road because Valley Avenue is going to handle 9,000 cars a day when it is completed." (Garbage firm officials have estimated 10 to 15 garbage trucks a day will use the route and on a heavy weekend, up to 75 citizens might travel to the transfer station.)

McLain also took exception with the citizens' petition, saying some of the residents told him they were told garbage trucks would be driving through the subdivisions if they didn't sign the petition. He urged citizens to learn about what they're signing before they sign.

Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire also had a complaint about the petition. "Someone circulating it said it had my full support," she said, "and I had never seen that petition and had never read a word of it. Nothing will incur my wrath faster than using my name without my knowledge."

LeClaire had opposed the transfer station location because "I thought there were some legitimate questions that have not been answered. I wanted it tabled for awhile," she said. "But we do have a solid waste problem."

The transfer station will handle Pleasanton's garbage when the Vineyard Avenue dump reaches capacity in about six months.

The temperature, humidity, air circulation, irrigation and water conditioning of this hydroponic growing unit are automatically controlled.

Indoor garden flourishes on Livermore's First St.

LIVERMORE — You could call it a wet greenhouse.

Its real name — or process — is "hydroponics," which translated means "water working," or "the cultivation of plants in water containing dissolved inorganic nutrients, rather than soil."

No matter what you call it, you can see one out on First Street on the lawn of Codiroli Ford and Mercury. It was put there by Milt Codiroli himself who is interested in the hydroponic process, hasn't been able to grow vegetables very successfully the traditional way and besides, has a friend who sells such "mini-farms."

According to a description of the mini-farm put out by Advance Systems Inc., it is a complete hydroponic growing unit with automatic controls regulating temperature, humidity, air circulation, irrigation and water conditioning.

An eight by 12-foot mini-farm like the one on First Street is constructed of specially treated fiber glass (for diffused lighting) and redwood. It sells for only $1,495. A smaller, eight by eight-foot version costs $995.

The Codiroli mini-farm contains two pans with clay pellets (any type of soil will do, even sand) in which seeds are planted. Water containing nutrients is stored under the pans and is circulated to within two inches of the clay surface twice a day for 15 minutes.

This is, essentially, the plants' "feeding time "g Watering periods are controlled automatically by a timer, just as the temperature is kept at a constant 85° F (exact temperature setting is up to the individual) by automatic heating and cooling systems.

Advantages of the mini-farm, cost aside, include a growing timecut by 20 to 30 percent, the ability to grow vegetables and flowers all year 'round, no digging and a weed and insect free environment.

Plants also can be grown closer together since their root balls are one-third the size of those usually found in conventional gardens, a result of their food coming to them rather than them seeking it out.

Codiroli's hydroponic growing unit contains rows of water melons, cucumbers, squash, bell peppers, lettuce, tomatoes, corn, parsley, beets, radishes and carrots.

Most were planted from seeds and a few from cuttings. The seeds were showing tiny leaves within six days of planting while the cuttings had started to flower.

Codiroli is jazzed about the whole mini-farm concept and is surprised at the number of people stopping to take a look at the hydroponic unit who know about the water growing process.

LLL wins $10 million

The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory announced that it has received a planning figure of $11 million for energy research in the coming fiscal year.

That represents an increase of 19.6 per cent over last year's $9.2 million energy figure, while the Lab's total budget has jumped by 16 per cent to $198.8 million.

The funding for energy research is still tentative and was not included in earlier estimates of the Lab's budget for 1975-76.

No new programs are expected to be started with the new funds, as cost of living increases and some personnel additions to old projects are expected to eat up the funds.

Thieves stole part of his life

PLEASANTON — Thieves who broke into John Camara's Live More Health Club during the last weekend of March got more than a handful of weights and barbells to stock a basement gym.

They walked off — slowly, no doubt, and straining — with a personal part of John's life. He made that equipment sowly, painstakingly, and with uncanny accuracy.

Those 20-pound dumbbells, for example, were accurate "down to the ounce." They had to be, since the weights were welded to the knurled-grip bar.

Those thieves will be lifting 20-pound bells till hell freezes over — or until they return to improve their set.

Camara, 6-foot-two-inch with biceps the size of some legs, may be waiting, however.

He's not at all "mean" about it, though, but he is quite upset. "There's only one set like it in the world," he said. "I made 'em."

A 130-pound barbell and 100-pound easy-curl bar were stolen in addition to the two 20-pound dumbbells.

"The missing weights destroy the routine of the people working out," John volunteered after returning from the machine shop where he's making a replacement set and expanding his additional stock.

But he is being generous. He's offering a $50, "no-questions-asked" reward for their return, or $200 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the culprits and the return of the equipment.

The thieves apparently broke in through a window of his Alameda County Fairgrounds studio while he was closed for the weekend.

Camara can be reached at 846-3400 between 6 a.m and 9 p.m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Lab to spend million locating uranium mines

Almost $1 million will be spent at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory over the next 18 months in an effort to identify potential new uranium mining areas in the far western states.

The program will cover the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, Idaho and Utah and is broken down into two basic parts.

One is a survey of stream sediments and waters and various related materials (known as hyrdogeochemicals) in which thousands of samples will be examined for possible high uranium content.

The results of that survey, plus existing state and local agency data, will then be programmed into the powerful lab computers and analysed by the use of computers programmed for "pattern identification".

Pattern recognition is simply going over all the variable results of the samples (amount of iron, amount of lead, etc. in each sample) and determining which percentages indicate the prescence of uranium.

In other words, it might turn out that uranium is always found with selenate; or is never found when selenate is present. Thus, prospecting becomes much easier, for rather than search for elusive uranium deposits, it is only necessary to know whether a much more common material like selenate is present. If selenate is a negative indicator, once it is found, the prospectors can move on; if it is a positive indicator, then other indicators can be checked without actually digging for uranium.

A unique feature of the pattern recognition program for computers is that the computers "learn" through the analyses of many samples. If iron is never found near uranium, then the computer will eventaully "learn" to automatically throw out any samples with iron nearby but will continue to pursue the program for samples that contain other metals.

It is not expected that the computer will give positive yes or no answers, but that it will indicate where the highest probability of finding uranium might be.

Dr. Bert Holder, chemist and leader of the LLL program, will head approximately a seven man team for the project, which has received $150,000 from the Ernergy Resources and Development Agency (ERDA) for the remainder of this fiscal year and another $800,000 for the following fiscal year

Kiwanis exchange program deadline Saturday

life style

Wendy Cohen, now attending school in Bremen, Germany through the auspices of the Kiwanis Honor Scholar Exchange program, has written of her initial impressions of being an American student in Germany.

The daughter of Samuel M. Cohen of Livermore, Wendy left last August for a year as part of the program that is co-sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Greater Livermore and the Bremen, Germany Kiwanis Club.

The program is open to high school students who will be juniors or seniors next year. Deadline for application to next year's program is Saturday.

Wendy's article, which was spurred by an earlier Times news story (Study habits stir commentary, March 20), notes basic differences between Germany and America as regards school and home life.

"Most schools in Germany are very strict and there is a set routine which the students must follow. The only choice they are given is in 11th grade when they choose between concentrating on languages and history or on math and science," Wendy continues.

"After the choice has been made, the student follows this course through to his end-examination in the middle of the 13th grade. The students in one grade are divided into different groups depending on what their main subject is (i.e., French, Latin, Math, etc). Thus the same people are together for most of the day . . . meeting others only in the school breaks and, of course, on weekends.

"There are no clubs in the school as we know them. School is a place for learning (on Saturdays as well!) and the Germans do quite a bit of this.

"There are, of course, advantages and disadvantages to both school systems. On the one hand, most Americans think back with a smile on their "good ole" high school days because, although we may not have all learned chemistry, physics, math, Latin, German, and French, it was, after all, fun.

"On the other hand," notes Wendy, "although the Germans may not have as good a time as we do in high school, they learn the equivalent in 13 years of what we do in high school and junior college put together. Unfortunately, we can judge the two systems only from our own points of view and it is difficult is to say for sure which one better."

Wendy also illustrates the parallels and differences in family life, adding that the differences are not so academic.

"In Germany, the attitudes are much more formal than in the U.S. Their lives are well-ordered and their houses are kept immaculate. One seemingly insignificant but important factor influencing this is the weather. It is true that the farther north one travels, the better-kept and more comfortable the houses become simply because a larger part of their lives is spent indoors.

"In California, on the other hand, where the temperature is an average 15 degrees Fahrenheit warmer, we are more likely to invest in garden furniture, a barbecue, or maybe even a pool instead of a new sofa or chair.

"The meal times are also different and the whole family is usually together for them. The main meal is eaten at 1 p.m. and German society is centered around this. Men and children come home for this mid-day meal and businesses close from 1 to 3 every afternoon. The meal consists usually of vegetables, potatoes, meat two or three times a week, casserole or soup.

"While many German wives work before they have children or when the children are older, the number is relatively small compared to the U.S. Apart from that, processed foods and even a large variety of meats are hardly to be found here.

"The younger generations of America and Germany are much more alike in their attitudes and activities than their parents are. Young people can be found all over running around in blue jeans, listening to rock'n roll music, going to movies or a concert, or gathering at a friend's house for a good time, much as we do in the U.S.

"A couple of things are different, though, since the minimum age for getting a driver's license is 18 and because it costs about $180, they ride most everywhere by bike or, if the weather is bad, by tram or bus, while many an American teenager buys a car or borrows the folks' car at 16 and 17 years of age."

"But actually in Germany, where the public transportation is extremely good, a car is not as necessary as in America where the distances are much greater. All of Germany is only as large as the state of Oregon! Another difference is that Germans are allowed to drink alcohol and enter bars at the age of 16 (although 16 and 17-year-old must leave the bar by 10 p.m.). So many a time they will be drinking beer or wine instead of an all-American coke.

"There always exist differences," concludes Wendy, "between any two countries, whether large or small. But I feel these differences can be overcome and it is possible for a person to mix in and even feel at home in another country. I can only speak for myself...I have done it and have found it the most rewarding experience of my life."

Cohen, in discussing the program, says the students involved have had a fine experience, have improved their language skills and gained a better understanding of the country and its people. Both Kiwanis Clubs have agreed that the program should continue.

The valley student selected will live in the home of the student who will be coming here from Germany or Austria. Neither student well be responsible for the costs of room and board, but the parents will be responsible for all other expenses incurred. SETTING THE SCENE

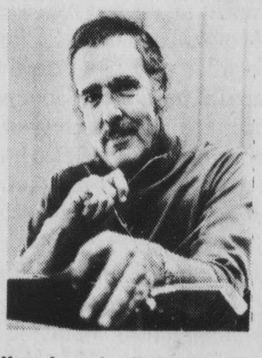
Bill Hayden



Frank Loesser would be very pleased with the Contra Costa Musical Theatre production of "GUYS AND DOLLS". It's a winner that more than makes up for all the bad passes one can make at that big floating crap game called life in the theatre.

In all probability, Director Glen Dubose is entitled to the major share of plaudits we'll be handing out for the over-all success of this show. However, I'm sure he'd be the first to point out there are many other important contributions. There is no ignoring the talent of Mike Biagi whose musical direction is only superb. I have been a fan of the talented young musician since 1971 when he lifted a mean baton on "PROMENADE." There is more bounce per bar in a musical directed by Biagi than any I've seen in many a moon and those in the pit and onstage certainly respond to his enthusiasm and professionalism. There also has to be a nod to Choreographer Don Wilson, Costume Designer Miriam Englar and Lighting Designer Scott Denison for the total concept of the production.

"GUYS AND DOLLS" is one of the few musicals where the nominal leads are completely overshadowed by the supporting cast. Sky Masterson and Sarah Brown are the runts of Damon Runyan's mighty imagination, so it is something of a tribute to Ken Hein and Mary Lou Meaden that they survive in memory at all. For a brief moment, at the beginning, I feared Hein was going to do another imitation of Brando, but he quickly shook himself free of that. His Sky Masterson became an independent soul and what a charmer he turned out to be. The regeneration of his rogue was quite believeable and vocally he was a tower of strength in the songs with Mary Lou Leaden.

Meaden's Sarah Brown was a delightful eyeful. Her voice, however, is small and needs all the support it could be given. This is a minor complaint, however, and can almost be overlooked in the general quality of her performance.

Now for the special goodies!

Ken Grantham is to be congratulated for his Nathan Detroit. When a viewer has been exposed to a Sam Levene or even a Frank Sinatra, it is difficult to take a lesser talent in one of the great musical comedy roles. Ken may not be a Levene or a Sinatra, but he certainly makes the most of his considerable talent and makes his own very indelible impression. He's not imitating any of the great Detroits who have preceded him. This is a rare accomplishment because, in this production, he's paired with one of this area's finest singing and acting talents in a skyrocketing role.

Vivian Blaine eat your heart out! Marie Cochran's Miss Adelaide is better than the original. Contrary to general opinion, big, brassy Adelaide is not a natural or a shoo-in role. It takes a major talent to give the proper style and delivery to that vacuous but vivacious victim of one of the longest engagements in history. Adelaide's machinations to get Nathan Detroit to the altar are monumental in concept and Marie Cochran takes full advantage of every raucous movement and moment that they provide.

It is fortunate indeed Director Dubose has peopled his stage with such other outstanding performers. Bill Carroll as Nicely-Nicely Johnson, Dennis Koheles as Harry the Horse and David Sunderman as Bip Julie are solid. They provide a balance for Cochran's powerhouse talent. They, and the rest of that motley Broadway crew, are strong enough to keep the show moving when the pyrotechnics of Miss Adelaide aren't in evidence. I'm sure Marie must be grateful for their firm support because a wobbly base would have diminished the overall effect. Everyone of the 37 actors, singers and dancers peopling the Civic Arts Theatre stage in this production is to be commended for a suoerior effort.

It isn't often the theatre buff is treated to the excitement of a lively, fresh approach to another production of a show that's been around for a decade or two.

Contra Costa Musical Theatre has provided an ooportunity for musical lovers to put some zing into their lives. For what it's worth, I'd suggest you call 798-8252 during the day to see if there are any available seats for the balance of what will have to be a much-too-short run.

"GUYS AND DOLLS" in Walnut Creek had an exiting audience tapping their toes and singing. Haopy laughter in the lobby, after the fact, is a wonder to hear. Unfortunately, it doesn't happen often enough. You should take advantage of this chance to join in the fun.

by Bernice Bede Osol

For Thursday, May 1, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful toward evening how you treat the property of others. Carelessness could prove expensive, either in cash or hard feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) At the last minute today you'll make a switch in plans. It will be far less beneficial for you than your original idea.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) One you've been depending upon for assistance will suddenly withdraw her offer, due to circumstances beyond her control.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Steer clear today of a friend who often acts rashly. Unfortunately, you'll be judged by the company you keep.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The more you hurry with household tasks today, the more you're apt to have accidents. Take it easy. The work will wait.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be on your best behavior this evening socially. A faux pas will only serve to tarnish your image.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep a protective eye on cherished things in your home today. Put them out of reach of careless guests or frolicking children.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a tendency today to unthinkingly blurt things out. Something you say in this manner may offend others in your company.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before making important purchases today, examine the merchandise for flaws or defects. Don't buy blindly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your mind will be centered on self-interests today. This may cause a friend to feel you are neglecting her.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're far from your best at keeping secrets today. It's not that you're a gossip — you're just too loose with your words.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Before taking a suggestion by a friend, quiz her thoroughly to be sure she knows from experience that it's workable.

Your Birthday

May 1, 1975

You will place greater emphasis this year on gaining knowledge for self-improvement. A practical outlet will be found for what you learn.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Pessimistic Pete looked over the dummy and counted losers. Some people count winners. Pete always counted losers. He counted one spade, one diamond and two clubs. An optimist could count just one club, but Pete was sure that West would hold the club ace.

Pete saw some chance to discard a club on dummy's fourth diamond and decided to start preparing for operation jettison. He let West hold the first spade. East played the three, but West continued with the queen so that Pete knew where the jack would show up. He won and promptly led dummy's deuce of diamonds. His plan was to play the nine, but East foiled this by producing the jack. Pete covered with the king and led out the queen and jack of trumps, followed by a diamond to dummy's ace. Then came the key play.

He led dummy's 10 of spades and discarded his nine of diamonds!

West had his choice of ways to let Pete make his contract. He could lead a diamond and set up dummy's fourth diamond; he could lay down his ace of clubs and set up Pete's king; or he could lead a spade for a ruff and a club discard.

NCS directors could change playoff setup

The folks who voted to bring you North Coast Section football playoffs last January could take their show off the air before the first reviews are ever published.

And those same people may pick up their option on a Northern California basketball championship after complaining that it caters to minor markets.

North Coast Section commissioners will dredge up both issues at a meeting in Marin County Saturday. The policies they lay down should be permanently etched in quicksilver.

The NCS, governing organization for more than 60 high schools from Fremont to the Oregon border, faced up to football and basketball playoffs at a meeting four months ago.

It voted narrowly to inaugurate NCS football championships but voted down a proposal to send the NCS basketball champion to a revised Tournament of Champions.

Now, however, commissioner Paul Gaddini says, NCS board members might take an abrupt about face.

The football playoffs could be postponed for a year, or dropped all together. And the TOC's proposal for an all-Northern California basketball championship may be accepted.

Whoever said school administrators are inflexible?

Not Gaddini, who has no idea what the outcome of Saturday's meeting will be. "The football playoff is sort of a sonofagun," he says. "The thing will be so close that two changed votes either way could decide it.

"Until yesterday I thought the proposal would pass," Gaddini admitted. "But now one league that supported playoffs has taken the position that it doesn't want to go for three more weeks of football."

The EBAL is on record favoring football championships.

Facing NCS commissioners will be a proposal for an eight-team post-season tournament in the Triple A, or large-school class. The schedule, if adopted, calls for first round games Nov. 21 and 22 with the following matchups:

South Valley Region — EBAL vs Mission Valley League

North Valley Region — Diablo Valley League vs Foothill League

North Bay Region — Marin County League vs Alamada County League

South Bay Region — Hayward League vs Catholic League

On the following weekend, winners from the Valley regions would face each other, as would the Bay region survivors. Finally, on Dec. 5, the championship game would be played.

Objections to the format include the three-week length, and the classification of leagues. There are indications that the Foothill and Catholic leagues don't want to be lumped with Triple A competitiors.

Armed with that knowledge, NCS board members Saturday can either accept or amend the proposed playoffs, postpone them for a year while leagues are realigned, or table the whole project.

As a footnote, the Hayward Athletic League informed the EBAL last month that it would like to restage their Turkey Bowl football game next fall, if the NCS playoff is scuttled. Marina defeated Dublin in the first Turkey Bowl last November.

As for the Tournament of Champions, there are indications that NCS involvement will be wheeled out for another vote during the Saturday meeting.

TOC officials want the champion of the Section to face off with six other Section basketball champs from across Northern California.

North Coast has said no to the concept once already. Its chief objection was the inclusion of San Francisco and Oakland sections. Those sections are comprised of six schools each, contrasted by the more than 60 in the North Coast.

NCS directors complained that Oakland and San Francisco teams would have far easier access to the TOC, and would benefit far greater in profit distribution.

Gaddini implies, however, that if that inequity is resolved, th NCS may agree to enter the TOC. "The directors favor the concept, they just oppose the plan," Gaddini said.

"I don't think there's been an erosion of opinion on the side of people who opposed the playoffs as proposed," he said. "But there might be room for a compromise now."

Neuts to Stockton

The Livermore Neutrons will travel to Stockton Saturday to face Club America in the Northern California Finals of the National Junior Challenge Cup soccer competition for under-19's.

The Neutrons reached the final round with a 2-1 win over Concordia of San Francisco last weekend.

Game time this Saturday will be 2:30. The winner will advance to the Western Regionals May 16-18, probably in Washington state. First round opponent there will be Arizona.

The Western Regional champion will play in Milwaukee June 14-15 for the National Cup.

The Neutrons have already dropped a 2-1 decision to Club America this season in a State Cup preliminary.
